

Richard Hart

DIVORCE

The fault line shifts, subterranean conflict rises.
Granite knitted together
in heat and compaction,
the force of fire,
the weight of crushing stone;
rock whose rough grain
flowed together while still hot;
granite splits.
Tons of grinding
crumbles the earth,
sparks at new surfaces,
a mountain pushing with all its mass
upon itself,
separation.