

Notes on Contributors

LOWELL BENNION is Associate Dean of Students and a professor of sociology at the University of Utah.

MARYRUTH BRACY is a specialist in teaching English as a Foreign Language. A textbook on this subject which she co-authored, Letters from Roger: Exercises in Communication, has just been published by Prentice-Hall.

MARY LYTHGOE BRADFORD is a travelling consultant in English for the U.S. General Accounting Office in Washington, D.C.

THOMAS E. CHENEY, a Professor of English at B.Y.U., is the author of Mormon Songs of the Rocky Mountains and Lore of Faith and Folly.

DENNIS CLARK is, in his own words, "Unemployed in Seattle, Washington, where it rains a lot and snows when colder, dragging his erratic 98.6 degrees from Fahrenheit University from employment agency to agency, occasionally writing verses about the weather, in search of a bureau to crat in, exercising his form-filling specialty in inter-natural espionage in hopes of working out his salvation with irrelevant fear and trembling."

VICTOR B. CLINE is a professor of clinical psychology at the University of Utah. Currently he is doing research on critical factors in marital success and the effect of TV violence on children.

MARSHALL R. CRAIG is a Professor of English at B.Y.U. where his courses in English Drama are noted for their lively discussions.

PETER CRAWLEY, a Professor of Mathematics at Cal Tech and presently a visiting Professor at B.Y.U., is a serious collector of rare Mormon Americana.

DENNIS DRAKE began writing poetry as a missionary in Eastern Canada. A collection of his verse, What You Feel, I Share, was published recently by Bookcraft (1971).

EUGENE ENGLAND, former editor of Dialogue, is Dean of Academic Affairs at St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota.

LELAND FETZER has recently translated The Russian Air Force in World War II (Doubleday, 1971). He was the author of "Tolstoy and Mormonism" in the Spring 1971 issue of Dialogue.

WILLIAM E. FORT is currently doing bibliographical work on political conservatism. Previously he has taught philosophy, psychology, economics and business administration at several colleges.

JOHN HALE GARDNER is chairman of the physics department at Brigham Young University, where he continues to play an important role in university curriculum and policy formation.

BRUCE W. JORGENSEN, a new member of Dialogue's Board of Editors, is a Ph.D. candidate in English at Cornell where he is preparing to write his dissertation on James Agee.

KARL KELLER teaches American Literature and American Studies at San Diego State College and will be teaching at the University of Claremont-Ferrand in France next year.

ARTHUR H. KING, recently retired as Director-General in charge of education for the British Council, is a professor of English at B.Y.U. He regards his poetry as being principally of value in giving him insight into real poets: "the composition of verse is a sine qua non to its criticism."

LINDA LAMBERT is a free-lance writer living in Phoenix, Arizona. She has published a number of articles and movie reviews and is currently preparing an essay on images of Mormons in the movies.

LOUIS G. MIDGLEY is a Professor of Political Philosophy at Brigham Young University. The author of Beyond Human Nature, he is presently writing a book on the contemporary Jewish political philosopher Leo Strauss.

Readers of Dialogue may remember JAMES MILLER from his introduction to David L. Wright in the Summer 1970 issue. Not long after writing that introduction, Mr. Miller passed away. Some of his unpublished poems were submitted to Dialogue by his widow, Mrs. Jean Miller of Logan, Utah.

CHARLES S. PETERSON, former Director of the Utah Historical Society, is an associate professor of History at Utah State University. His book on Mormon colonization of Arizona will soon be published by the University of Arizona Press.

CARROLL QUIGLEY is a professor of History at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. An expert on recent economic history, he is currently completing a book on the relationship between weapons systems and political stability.

ROBERT REES is the editor of Dialogue.

KARL SANDBERG, a member of Dialogue's Board of Editors, is currently chairman of the French Department at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minnesota.

LINDA BUHLER SILLITO is a graduate of the University of Utah with a degree in English. She has received awards in various local literary contests, including the League of Utah Writers and the Utah Poetry Society.

W. CLEON SKOUSEN teaches religion at B.Y.U. Formerly Chief of Police in Salt Lake City, he was for sixteen years associated with the F.B.I. He is the author of numerous books on religious and political subjects.

WALLACE STEGNER is well-known for his writings on the western experience. He is currently writing a biography of Bernard DeVoto.

SAMUEL W. TAYLOR, a professional writer, has recently published an historical novel on the Mormons in Nauvoo, Nightfall at Nauvoo (1971).

GORDON C. THOMASSON, an associate editor of Dialogue, is a graduate student in the Department of Religious Studies at the University of California at Santa Barbara. He is the editor of War, Conscription, Conscience and Mormonism (1971).

RONALD WILCOX, a writer for both stage and film, has played many lead roles at the Dallas Theater Center where he is a resident artist in the Center's Company.

FREDERICK G. WILLIAMS is an Assistant Professor of Spanish and Portuguese at U.C.L.A. and an Associate Editor of Dialogue and The Carpenter.

HENRY J. WOLFINGER, an archivist-trainee at the National Archives in Washington, D.C., has done extensive research on relations between the Federal Government and Utah Territory.
